

Dear Authors and Readers,

We are happy to continue publishing The International Journal of Integrative Pediatrics and Environmental Medicine in 2019. We support the publication of high quality, peer-reviewed papers from different fields of medicine that fit our focus on the integrative medical home and the physical and psychological environment of families and particularly children. Modifiable environmental factors can have substantial impacts on childhood health and will be addressed in systematic ways in the journal. Cellular and molecular mechanisms of development are of great interest. We hope that our journal will continue to contribute to the maintenance of a healthy international population.

We began publishing in 2014, have a respectable and stable board of scientist/physician reviewers, and a new publishing electronic platform, which will allow us to maintain low costs for authors. As our journal grows, we continue to learn together, dear reader, through your feedback and we are open to future improvement.

The International Journal of Integrative Pediatrics and Environmental Medicine accepts original papers, case reports, letters to the editor, review articles, and short publications of hot topics at our portal at IJPEM.com. Young investigators will get special attention and editorial help.

The journal is published in English, but we can work with all non-English speaking authors to achieve grammatically correct and fluent manuscripts.

We are not indexed on PubMed or Scopus yet, but we are working to satisfy the remaining requirements and hope to be accepted for indexing soon. In the interim, articles can be located by title or authors using common Internet search engines.

We are happy to invite you to publish in The International Journal of Integrative Pediatrics and Environmental Medicine in 2019.

Sincerely yours,

Tetyana L. Vasylyeva MD, PhD (Managing Editor)

Candace Myers PhD (Editor-in-Chief)
